

How to introduce SaturnShift to a business

You do not need to be a payments expert to refer a business. Your role is to make a relevant introduction and share your link or your partner code. SaturnShift handles sign-up, review and onboarding.

1

Identify a business that could benefit

Think of businesses that invoice clients, take payments online, sell through a website or WooCommerce store, or keep their books in QuickBooks Online.

2

Understand what they need today

Ask how they invoice, how customers pay them and where they sell. SaturnShift is most relevant when they use several tools for these, or want to offer customers more ways to pay.

3

Explain SaturnShift simply

One platform to accept cards, bank payments and stablecoins, send invoices, bill on a schedule and sell online. The product overview in this toolkit says it in a page.

4

Share your referral link or partner code

Send your link, or give the business your code to enter when it signs up or upgrades from Starter. A business new to SaturnShift gets a 30-day free trial on its first paid plan.

5

Let the business register and onboard

The business signs up, chooses a plan and completes onboarding with SaturnShift directly. Every business is reviewed, and card and ACH payments are subject to Stripe's requirements.

6

Track your referrals

Follow your referrals and commissions in your partner dashboard.

What you do not need to do

- No merchant underwriting or approval decisions
- No payment processing or handling of funds
- No technical setup or onboarding work

SaturnShift is a unified payments, invoicing and commerce platform for businesses. Partners may earn a referral commission, so disclose your relationship with SaturnShift where required, and never promise a business approval, savings or results.
